“ Somewhere around 6 years ago, this cute little boy named Brennan showed up on our doorstep and introduced himself . That became the beginning of a fast and true friendship between Brennan and my son Paul , and brought Terry and I into each other's orbit . Over the years I came to value her friendship more than I can say. She was the most thoughtful kind of friend - always making time for lunch outings over her school breaks ; a hoot to go out with for 'martinis as big as our heads' at knights ; bringing us chocolate babka from NYC and leaving homemade scones on my doorstep when I was having a hard week. I loved talking to her about books and especially hearing her exuberance over what she was teaching. Even more beautiful was listening to her talk with so much pride and love about her guys. She was probably the proudest Mom and Wife on the planet . The biggest gift she and Patrick and Brennan gave our family was making their home a sort of second home for Paul and I loved getting texts from Terry telling me that ' Paul was staying for his 2nd dinner lol' or 'don't know what's so funny but the boys are shaking the house with their laughter'. I am thankful for the fun times we shared and the kindness and love she always brought to our family.

“ Terry was not just one of those parents you meet when volunteering together to make great things happen for our kids. Sure, she was efficient and a great organizer. She was creative and a great cookie-baker. She took on big jobs like the Bandquet and made them happen for Pioneer Bands. But, Terry was just so fun and funny! Working beside her at an event was just like going out with a friend for coffee, only minus the coffee and sitting still, because Terry just kept moving and getting the job done, and made being a part of it fun for anyone who worked beside her. She was really smart, and so dedicated to her students and to education; I loved hearing her ideas for lesson plans for her middle school students. Clearly, she was a Master teacher, that teacher you never forget, who helps many students find their talent, their passion, who helps them find out who they are and who they can be. Think of all the lights she helped to light in all the hearts of all the students who were blessed to call her their teacher. Terry's light shines still in Brennan and Patrick, and in all of us who were lucky enough to call her our friend.
With love and gratitude for a beautiful woman,
